All reasonable arrangements will be made to permit the conferring Parties or arbitrator to have access to the Employer's premises to view any working conditions, which may be relevant to the settlement of the grievance. Re: Casual Shift Call-in Casual Employees will be called in for available shifts in order of seniority on a rotational basis on dates that a Casual Employee indicates they are available. When a Casual Employee accepts and works a call-in shift they will move to the bottom of the call-in list. Each program will keep a separate call-in list.

Casual Employees will submit their dates and hours of availability to their Team Lead(s) for the following month at least five (5) business days prior to the first (1st) of the month. I.e., on April 24th, Casual Employees will submit their availability for the upcoming month of May. Employees must submit their availability for the months of July/August by June 1st and for the months of December/January by November 1st.

Casual Employees who do not submit their availability five (5) business days prior to the first (1st) of the next month understand that available shifts may be offered to a Casual Employee below them in seniority who had their shift calendar in on time. If no availability is submitted before the first (1st) of the month, the Employer is not obligated to call the Casual Employee within that month, and that employee will be at the bottom of the call-in list for the duration of the month.

If a Casual Employee has submitted their availability, they should be available to work if called. If they refuse when called, this is a refusal shift. If a Casual Employee has provided their availability and then refuses one (1) shift during their given availability, they will move down one spot on the list for call-ins. Second (2nd) and third (3rd) refusals will result in moving down one more spot each.

Refusals to work during given available time will be acceptable when that Casual Employee has accepted a shift in a different program, approved leave of absence, or under special circumstances such as family emergency, formal travel/weather advisories or in circumstances deemed beyond the control of the employee and will not result in the employee moving down the list.

Moving down on the call-in list means that the employee will go down in the order to be offered work, even if they have the greatest seniority. The consequence of moving down on the call-in list for offered shifts only applies for that specific quarter. Each quarter (¼), the call-in list will return to seniority by hire date.

Casual Employees' employment will be under review should a Casual Employee refuse to work on three (3) occasions during their given availability within a three (3) month period, unless there is good and sufficient cause or an approved leave of absence. Refusal of work includes not answering calls for offered shifts within a reasonable time frame i.e., one (1) hour. Meaning, if the Casual Employee is called to work a shift and they do not answer and/or do not return the call within one (1) hour of receiving the call, this is considered a refusal shift and will result in that employee being moved down on the call-in list. In circumstances where shift coverage is needed immediately or within three (3) hours of the time of calls being placed, five (5) minutes will be the wait time between calling Casual Employees should the first call not answer; however, this will not count as a shift refusal.

Casual Employees who have not indicated their express availability may be called for open shifts, however refusing a shift that is not on an available day will not be considered a refusal.

Casual Employees who are not on an approved leave of absence and are not available to pick up shifts for two (2) consecutive months will be considered to have abandoned their position with the organization unless there is verifiable reason why the employee could not reasonably have called.

It is important to note that Casual Employees be aware that the staffing person is not obligated to call more than two (2) contact numbers per employee. It is up to the Casual Employee to ensure the Employer has updated contact information and they are available to take the call or phone back within the specified period one (1) hour of receiving the call for work) when they have indicated their availability.

The Employer will keep an up-to-date record of all calls offering casual work.

If a Casual Employee is ill, they will call in to temporarily remove their name from their indicated availability and call in to resume their availability when their wellness permits. This will not impact their designated spot on the call-in list.

Shifts that are available for casuals with more than five (5) days notice, will be put up as available on the When to Work App (or other similar scheduling app), and Team Leads may call and/or text Casual Employees to seek availability.
